A note from Randy

Greetings fellow Mustang enthusiasts – Oh those family vacations. It's that time of year when many families travel by car to the ends of the earth to enjoy the many wonderful activities available to us. Imagine traveling with the Griswold family in the movie "National Lampoon's Family Vacation" to Walley World in the family's Wagon Queen Family Truckster. Besides the family dog being dragged to its death and Aunt Edna kicking the bucket and the kids fighting with one another, the car they rode in was one of the ugliest I have ever seen. To quote the car's salesman, "If you think you hate it now, wait 'till you drive it." All Ford emblems were covered up with no less than ten fake wood panels, a giant grille, roof rails, and gills. It was painted with metallic pea – an awful color of green. I didn't realize that it was based on the 1983 Crown Victoria wagon which was the most expensive version of Ford's full-size car, the LTD. At the time, it was only a few hundred dollars more than the Mustang GT 5.0.

My "Lampoon Family Vacation" was a trip my parents took us on to Key West, Florida from here in Illinois when we were quite young. Eight people were packed into a Ford Galaxie (medium brown) and no one wearing a seat belt. Mom and dad, along with sister Karen, were in the front seat and the rest of us in the back seat (Randy, Lisa, Kevin, Dan, and Lori). The Griswold movie reminds me of our trip. It seemed like all we did was fight in the back seat with everyone complaining that everyone else was touching them. Tell me, how do you pack five kids in the backseat of car with no one touching each other? Mom would be screaming at us to behave, and my dad would continue to threaten us by pulling the car over where he could remove his belt and give us a whipping. I don't know how either of our parents remained sane. I remember eating a bunch of White Castle sliders and dad buying a large coke (probably a medium by today's standards) from McDonald's with the five of us kids sharing it. I don't think any of us ended up wetting our whistles besides Dan who gulped instead of sipping. Karen ended up going to the hospital for seizures, someone got stung by a jellyfish, Lori sat on the hump in the backseat, Dan was banned from swimming when he defied an order from my mom to not get into the pool (he claimed he got pushed into the water), Lori had to bail from the car to vomit after getting car sick multiple times, etc. What a time we had ☺. I hope everyone experiences fun times with their loved ones this summer.

I am looking forward to our car show this month. Thanks to everyone for helping out. We, as a club, offer our prayers to those in our club who are experiencing medical complications/sickness. God bless everyone, especially those who own Mustangs!
